My Final Checklist

Ten points to genuine self-custody · part of the Bitcoin Beginner Guide · Date: _____

Not your keys, not your coins. As long as your Bitcoin sits on an exchange, you only have a balance in their database. Only once the coins are on your own wallet and the seed phrase is stored safely do they belong to you. Every point below closes a real gap. Only tick it off when it is actually done, not when it is planned.

1 · THE TEN POINTS

No.	What needs to be done	✓	Done on	Chapter
1	Bought Bitcoin on a trustworthy exchange or P2P platform.	☐		2
2	Ordered the hardware wallet directly from the manufacturer and received it sealed. A damaged seal is a warning sign.	☐		3
3	Set up the wallet, wrote down the 24 words of the seed phrase by hand and practiced the recovery once.	☐		3, 5
4	Secured the seed phrase on metal, or planned it with a concrete date.	☐		5
5	Seed phrase and hardware wallet are kept in separate places.	☐		5
6	At least one second copy of the seed phrase at a different location.	☐		5
7	Sent a test amount to my own wallet and confirmed its arrival.	☐		4
8	Moved the remaining coins from the exchange to my own wallet.	☐		4
9	No seed phrase stored digitally: no photo, no screenshot, no cloud, no password manager.	☐		5
10	A trusted person knows that a seed phrase exists and what to do, or written emergency instructions are in place.	☐		6

2 · FOR EMERGENCIES

Who knows that a seed phrase exists? (first name or initials only)
Where are the emergency instructions? (initials only, no location in plain text)

⚠ This sheet must never hold seed words, a passphrase, a PIN or locations in plain text. It is a progress sheet and may be found without giving anything away. Whoever has the seed phrase has everything. The device protects it in daily use but does not replace safe storage.
